MADRID, Spain (AP)—A van rigged as a shrapnel bomb was detonated by remote control Monday as a load of civil guards passed.

Officials said eight guards were killed and 44 people were wounded, including 12 civilians.

A group claimed responsibility, the governing Socialist Party and the Basque separatist group ETA.

The Basque separatist group ETA has carried out many similar attacks on military and police targets, most recent a car bombing April 14 that killed five paramilitary civil guards.

Twisted metal, mangled cars and shards of glass littered the Dominican Republic Square in a fashionable residential district about three miles from the center of the capital.

The blast was so powerful it threw against a wall as I was coming up the subway," radio announcer Los Cofrades said. "There is ten glass all over the place."

An officer riding next to the bus was blown from the vehicle by force of the blast, but landed on feet unhurt. Diego Cortes Valdes, a journalist, had "no idea what happened, but the next minute I was lying, unhurt, next to the wreckage."

A spokesman for the civil guard, wearing distinctive gray-green uniforms and patent leather tricornes, set them off from other police.

70 young officers were being sent to a highway patrol training camp in the bus and a trailing van. The van exploded, scattering shrapnel and about 110 pounds of plastic explosives.

The spokesman would not allow his name to be used.

Wounded officers were being treated in serious condition. A television station reported the bombing was an ETA response to the government's deportation to Gabon on charges of the separatist group's military leader.

omingo Irujo Abasolo, who is 42 years old, was living in France for 18 years as a political refugee. Police arrested him months ago on charges of violating refugee regulations by taking refuge in his home.

He was "probably carried off by the ETA's 'samurai,' which is based in Madrid and is believed responsible for at least 20 attacks this year."

Monday's assault was the most violent in lives of any since since the ETA began killing police, civil guards and military officers in 1968 as part of its fight for independence.

ETA has been active in the three Basque provinces of northern Spain.

Shuttle gets new look for flight in 1988

WASHINGTON (AP)—NASA Monday announced plans to send a shuttle to fly again until 1988 but its engineers are working on a new design for the booster stages which caused January's crash.

A new design will be developed and built in case no other suitable one is found for the joint sales on cost. The space agency said in a report to President Reagan.

The progress report, delivered to White House by NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher, follows by a month the recommendations made by a presidential commission investigating the Challenger accident.

NASA agrees with the recommendations and is vigorously implementing them, Fletcher said in a report.

The interim report is expected to be the administration decide what about the building a replacement for Challenger. The accident left the fleet with only three vehicles

Court sentences spy

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Richard W. Miller, the only FBI agent ever accused of espionage, was sentenced Monday to two life terms plus 50 years in prison for spying for the Soviet Union.

The judge who passed sentence said he hoped Miller would "not walk again in this country as a free man."

Miller, who had not spoken during his trial, broke his silence to tell the judge he is innocent and will continue to fight his conviction.

"I never intended to injure this country or benefit the Soviet Union," Miller told the packed, hushed courtroom. U.S. District Judge David Kenyon, who also fined Miller $60,000—the maximum—replied with an emotional statement in which he defended his rulings during the long trial, and he denounced Miller as a man who had everything and threw it away because he was ungrateful.

Kenyon said Miller had failed to learn the lesson that the judge said his mother taught him as a child—"you must be grateful for what you have."

Kenyon said he planned to sentence Miller severely as an example to the nation.

"It seems to me there should be a recognition on the part of all citizens of the United States," he said, explaining he felt that with the increasing incidents of espionage in the United States, "we begin to take it more lightly."

Miller was found guilty of conspiring to pass classified documents to the Soviet Union, of copying classified documents, and of delivering them to a foreign government with knowledge they would be used to the advantage of a foreign power and to the disadvantage of the United States.

He also was found guilty of communicating the documents to a known representative of the Soviets.

Miller, 49, was found guilty June 19 of espionage and bribery by a jury that rejected his claim he was trying to infiltrate the Soviet KGB as a double agent to save his flagging career.

Miller was arrested and charged with spying in October 1984 with Svetlana Ogorodnikov and her husband, Nikolay. The Ogorodnikovs, both Soviet emigrants, pleaded guilty to spying charges in June 1985 and are serving prison sentences.

Kenyon praised the FBI, saying it acted with compassion and intelligence in its handling of Miller. Accusations that the FBI gave Miller special treatment because he was Mormon were unfounded, the judge said.

State rules against local govt. change

By AUDREY GADZEKO
Senior Reporter

A proposal to change the form of government currently operating in Utah County was ruled unconstitutional by the state attorney general.

The proposal, drawn up by Citizens for Better Utah County Government, called for seven part-time county commissioners instead of the present three full-time commissioners.

The attorney general's office questioned the legality of the charter drawn by the group as well as the state law under which the proposal was formulated, said Susan Richards, administrative assistant to the Utah County Commission.

"According to state law, counties can only select from three specific forms of government and the attorney general's office does not believe the proposal falls under this provision," said Richards. "What the citizens' group did was draft their own form of government instead of sticking with the three specified forms."

But according to Keith Haines, a member of the citizen's group, the attorney general's ruling was a misunderstanding. "Utah law allows for a charter to be developed to change county government," Haines said.

The group also said change in County government was long overdue. The proposed seven county commissioner system would allow actual geographic representation by dividing the county into five districts, a factor absent from the present form of government.

Haines said, "It is a better system because people will have more accessibility to their elected officials who will be able to deal with them on a personal basis."

The proposal, if voted on, will create room for debate from the public and their commissioners as well as ensure more accountability, Haines explained. "With seven people there will be less consensus and thus a built-in guarantee of debate and accountability," he said.

The suggested form of government also saves money for the county and the taxpayer since commissioners will be part-time instead of full-time and will thus receive less pay, said Haines. Each Commissioner is presently paid an annual salary of about $45,000 plus allowances and benefit packets, he said. Under the new proposal, commissioners will be paid about $4,000 annually, he explained.

County Commissioner Robert Warnick, disagrees with the claim the proposal saves money. "Although they are eliminated, See county, page two..."

Israeli jets bomb guerilla targets

AINAB, Lebanon (AP)—Twelve Israeli jets rocketed and bombed Palestinian guerrilla targets in hills southeast of Beirut on Monday in apparent retaliation for rocket attacks on northern Israel. The raid killed four people and wounded 12, officials said.

Police and the International Red Cross reported in separate communications that two Palestinian fighters died and 12 people were wounded during the 30-minute, late-morning raid on the hill towns of Aitah, Baysour, Shimlan and Ainab.

Druse spokesmen said later that two Druse militiamen also were killed.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami claimed the attack was aimed at sabotaging a Beirut security plan launched under Syrian auspices two weeks ago to reinstate government authority in the capital.

Syria has sent about 500 troops to west Beirut to help enforce the plan, which was intended to end a 27-month reign of Moslem militias characterized by assassinations, kidnappings, aircraft hijackings and bank robberies.

A squadron of 10 P-15 and two Phantom F-4 fighter-bombers delivered their payloads in five passes over targets in the mountains about 12 miles southeast of Beirut, police said.

The Israeli command in Tel Aviv said its pilots reported "accurate hits" (on an array of terrorist concentrations.) It said all planes returned safely.

The raid appeared aimed at Syrian-backed Palestinian factions active in the region.

It followed overnight rocket attacks on Israel's northern Galilee region. Israeli military sources confirmed an Israel Radio report of the attacks but said no injuries or and halted satellite launch capability. Building a replacement for Challenger and subsequent enhancing of the shuttle stage parts inventory would cost $2.5 billion.

The first recommendation of the Challenger commission, headed by former Secretary of State William P. Rogers, was that "the faulty solid rocket motor joint and seal must be changed" and that "no design options should be prematurely precluded because of schedule, cost or reliance on existing hardware."

A leak in a joint on the right booster rocket of Challenger allowed hot gases to escape, causing the main fuel tank to explode in the 44th second of flight. All seven astronauts aboard, including school teacher Christa McAuliffe, were killed.

In its report NASA said safety is the primary objective for the rocket boosters and that "a secondary objective will be to minimize the schedule impact by using existing hardware."

South African strike gets spotty support of students, workers

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Tens of thousands of black workers shunned jobs and schools Monday to protest South Africa's state of emergency, but the main effect appeared to be in areas noted for anti-apartheid activism.

The government said at least 80 percent of the nation's 1.7 million black students returned to school for resumption of classes after a six-week vacation. That would mean up to 340,000 stayed away in response to a call from militant youth leaders.

Black trade unions proclaimed a national "day of action" against the detention of more than 200 labor leaders, who are among an estimated 3,500 people held without charge.

Participation appeared spotty in the first concerted mass protest since the nationwide state of emergency was imposed June 12, according to employers and academic monitoring groups.

Up to 70 percent of workers stayed off the job at Port Elizabeth, or reported briefly and left. The industrial city on the Indian Ocean has been a center of protest during nearly two years of racial unrest in which more than 2,000 people have been killed.

Only scattered strikes occurred in most parts of the country, however, and the vital mining industry reported few problems.

Elijah Barseil, president of the Congress of South African Trade Unions and vice president of the National Union of Mineworkers, was released Friday after two weeks in detention, said Marcel Golding, spokesman for the mine workers.

"That's probably one reason why there hasn't been widespread action today in the mines," he said.

Restrictions under the emergency include rules that prohibit journalists from reporting acts of security forces without official permission, publishing names of detained people and quoting "subversive statements," which are vaguely defined.

In calling for the day of action, including sit-down strikes and other on-the-job protests, the 500,000-member union Congress said detentions of labor leaders were causing havoc in industrial relations.

Employer groups have made the same complaint to President P.W. Botha's government, but also appealed to the unions to stop job actions that have plagued several industries since the emergency took effect.

The outlawed African National Congress, the main guerrilla movement fighting white rule, endorsed the day of protest.

A statement issued at its headquarters in Lusaka, Zambia, said: "Let us make July 14 a day on which we bring our might to bear on the Botha regime. . . . Let us act in unity, intensity the mass and armed actions, spread unmovability to all corners of the land and move to people's power."

A provincial supreme court hearing began Monday in Durban on a challenge of the emergency's legality by the Metal and Allied Workers Union. The union argued that Botha did not inform Parliament of the emergency decree, as required, and that the ban on "subversive statements" was too vague.

Militant youths called the school boycott to protest emergency detentions and new security measures at black schools that allow authorities to turn away suspected troublemakers, with no right of appeal, and require students to produce new identity cards on demand.

County rework plan doomed by state

nating the positions of two full commissioners, their proposal calls for a number of departmental positions. I don't see how that saves money. My feeling is it will cost more money," said Warnick.
Warnick said the salary being quoted for part-time commissioners was ridiculous. "I don't see how you can expect someone to run for commissioner at $4,000 a year when it costs more than that to run."
Warnick does agree more representation is needed in the county commission but says he opposes some of the specifics of the proposal.
In spite of all the debate and contrary to the ruling, the group is still proceeding with the proposal. In a few days, the county will determine if enough signatures have been collected to allow the proposal to be considered in the November ballot, said Warnick. The group has already collected 13,301 signatures. But some of those signatures to be considered in the November ballot, said Warnick. "There are some duplications, some we can't read and some from out of state and they don't count," he said.

If the group is unable to get enough signatures, the issue becomes moot and the county will then consider other alternatives; if enough signatures are found and the proposal is passed, there will still be legal issues to be grappled, said Warnick.

Union joins Kennecott with pay cut

GLOBE, Ariz. (AP) — Unions representing copper workers have reached a tentative contract agreement with Inspiration Consolidated Copper Co., the last of five producers to come to terms with unions, and a rank-and-file vote could come as early as the end of the week.
The agreement, which neither side would explain specifically, was reached early Monday morning after around the clock bargaining, union officials said.
"While the proposed agreement calls for significant sacrifices on the part of our members, it does include provisions for bonuses tied to the future price of copper," union negotiator Carl Morris said.
Workers at the other four copper companies, including Utah's Kennecott, all approved new contracts that will cut average wages to around $11 an hour.

Plane flies high toward new record

MOJAVE, Calif. (AP) — The long-distance aircraft Voyager approached the 10,000-mile mark as it headed south from San Francisco on Monday, winding down the second half of a test flight scheduled to end Tuesday.
"The crew is totally up and the air-frame and mechanical parts of the plane are perfect," spokesman Lee Herron said at Voyager headquarters in a hangar at Mojave Airport.
If all goes well, the pilots will try to surpass the closed-course absolute distance record of 12,532 statute miles. The craft had flown 9,677 statute miles, or 8,400 nautical miles, Herron said early Monday. Eighty-seven nautical miles equal 100 statute miles.
Voyager is traveling about 102 mph and getting about 29 miles per gallon of gas, Herron said.

Board to fund 3 Utah water projects

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Three counties will receive a total of $1,053,000 for water projects from the Utah Board of Water Resources, which reviewed feasibility reports on four proposals during its July meeting here.
The board authorized $544,000 to Washington, in Washington county, to upgrade its culinary water system. The project includes building a 2-million-gallon, water-storage tank and test wells and constructing about a mile of pipeline.
St. George, also in Washington County, was authorized $350,000 from the board's conservation and development fund to pay for a second phase of a secondary, water-sprinkle irrigation project.
Salem Irrigation and Canal Co., Utah County, was authorized $101,000 from the board's revolving construction fund to help pay for an irrigation system for farmland and city lots in Payson.

American Fork decides on bonds

AMERICAN FORK, Utah (AP) — Voters here decide Tuesday whether to approve two bonds totalling $885,000 to spruce up and expand public buildings and to complete the city's water line loop.
Proposition One would authorize $300,000 in general obligation bonds to improve the city hall and public safety buildings, including making them accessible to the handicapped by an Oct. 16 federal deadline. The American City Hall's white paint would be replaced with the original brick, and its west entrance restored while the public safety building's court space would be added in size, and additional bays for fire and ambulance equipment would be added.

Deborah Smith, a product manager for PAC BELL, says her company knows when something is VERY HOT and wants to be the first of the country's seven regional phone companies to offer SPESHUL numbers.
"We're following the trend," she said. "We're certainly not setting it."
There are limits to the numbers game, though.

Dennis R. Moore was charged with the second-degree felony by the Utah County Attorney's office, according to Wayne Watson, deputy county attorney for Utah county.
Moore's wife, Sue Ellen Moore, was charged with the homicide and aggravated robbery of Selhost. Her preliminary hearing is scheduled for 1 p.m. Wednesday.

U. of U. takes stand on apartheid

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The University of Utah Institutional Council on Monday took a stronger stand against apartheid, but left mostly intact its policy of investing in companies that do business in South Africa.
Council members did vote to sell off stock in companies which have not signed an informal agreement to avoid discriminatory hiring practices in the racially divided country, but chairman Des Barker said the university does not have stock in any such companies.
In an 11-page report to the council, Barker outlined 12 recommendations covering the university's investment policy and its response to calls for harsher measures opposing apartheid.

The recommendations included adding courses "on apartheid and other systems that deny human rights to individuals," increasing scholarship funds for South Africans and exchanging professors with South African universities.
"Within the limitations imposed by law, the University of Utah should maintain stocks only in corporations which are signatories to the Sullivan Principles and are rated in Category 1 or 2-A of those principles," one recommendation read.
The Sullivan Principles, named for former General Motors board member Leon Sullivan, are a set of non-binding guidelines used by some companies in dealing with South African companies. The guidelines call for measures including fair hiring practices for blacks and other non-discriminatory policies.

About 10 students opposed to any university investments in companies with ties to South Africa remained silent until after the recommendation were approved, then walked out of the meeting chanting, "Trustees, you know there's blood on your portfolio."
"We view it as a morally unconscionable act, politically naive act, and an economically, frankly, stupid act, not to divest their stocks," said Alia Chandler, a member of Students Against Apartheid.

But Peterson said the council had acted honorably.

Party elects leader in Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Truong Chinh, a party founder, a key figure in five wars and the man regarded as Vietnam's strictest ideologue, was named Monday as leader of the ruling Communist Party in Vietnam.
The 79-year-old Chinh succeeds Le Duan, who died last week, as the all-powerful party's secretary-general.
Chinh already headed the State Council, the supreme body of government, and his selection as party chief was seen as an indication that liberalization would not follow Le Duan's death, as some observers had speculated.
The official Voice of Vietnam radio, monitored in Bangkok, said Chinh was unanimously elected by the members of the party's Central Committee.
Chinh immediately called on Communist officials, the people and the army to rally around the party and prepare for the 6th party congress, which will set new policy goals and restructure the organization's leadership, the broadcast said.
The congress is scheduled for November.

Western diplomats described Chinh as an orthodox Marxist. The diplomats, who insisted on anonymity, said they expected few changes in Vietnam's rigidly ideological, pro-Soviet policies with Chinh at the helm.
"It shows they are more rigid than we thought. . . . Vietnam is likely to be more conservative in policy, particularly in economic policy," said one diplomat.
The broadcast said Chinh was elected after the committee observed a minute of silence in memory of Le Duan.
Chinh, who had been second to Le Duan in the party Politburo, helped Ho Chi Minh found the Indochinese Communist Party in 1950. He was a protagonist of Vietnamese wars against the Japanese, the French, and the Americans, as well as the 1979 border war with China and the occupation of Cambodia, which Hanoi invaded in late 1978.
The radio quoted Chinh as saying the 6th congress would elect "the new composition of the party central committee."

Pawn shop: solution to cash woes

By SHEILA SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Being short on cash and in debt is a familiar problem for many people. One solution, becoming very popular, is a trip to the local pawn shop.
Because of the declining economy, going to pawn shops to sell or buy is becoming a more popular option in shopping. According to local pawn shop owner Glen Werner, "When the economy heads downward, pawn shops and second hand stores tend to flourish."
At one time, pawning stolen merchandise was a common problem, but new laws requiring dealers to record all items received has reduced this problem. According to Provo Detective Sgt. Phil Johnson, the recovery of stolen items through pawn shops is one out of 1,000.
A person who has never been to a pawn shop might not know what to expect. When pawning an item, there are two ways it can work, according to Mike Robertson, a shop dealer. The first is to pawn an item, which means the seller has a time period to repurchase the item, usually 30 days, before it goes on the shelf to be sold. After the allotted time is up, the pawn dealer can sell the item. The second way to pawn a possession is to sell the item to the dealer. The dealer can then sell the item at any time.

Dealers have different systems of figuring buying cost, said Robertson. "I generally pay half of what I think I can sell the item for."
The most common pawned items, said Werner, "are guns, appliances and jewelry. The easiest to sell are TVs, guns and ghetto blasters."
According to Robertson, there are two basic kinds of people who sell items at a pawn shop. The first are those people who have trouble managing their money. The second type are those who have an emergency or an unexpected bill come due.
Robertson said only about two out of 10 people rebuy their items from his shop.

A grand birthday party to celebrate the state's 90th birthday will be featured in addition to the usual fair attractions. "We have received word from Governor Bangert that he is planning to attend the opening ceremony," said Hair.
Fair highlights include artistic entertainment, a rodeo Friday and Saturday nights at 8:00.

Utah's international operations, completed Friday, does not require government approval. Philip Morris still intends to sell Seven-Up U.S. operations.
Pepsico is also buying two bottling plants in Toronto and Ottawa, the company said. The plants, which already bottle Pepsi-Cola products, weren't part of the original deal that the FTC opposed in June on antitrust grounds.
Despite the purchase, Pepsico, headquartered in Purchase, N.Y., still will have a much smaller presence overseas than Coca-Cola.

Pepsico buys rights to 7-Up's world trade

NEW YORK (AP) — Pepsico Inc., parent of the world's No. 2 soft-drink producer, said Monday it has reached an agreement to buy the international unit of rival Seven-Up Co. from Philip Morris Cos.

The price was $246 million. The company earlier had announced plans to buy both the domestic and foreign operations of Seven-Up for $380 million, but the Federal Trade Commission said it opposed the deal, Philip Morris subsequently ended that agreement.

Pepsico said the purchase of Seven-

Academics producing excellence

THOMAS NEWMAN
Universe Staff Writer

According to some academic experts on campus, BYU's standard for academic excellence is not only producing better prepared students than the past, but is also attracting better high school graduates to its doors. However, these experts also acknowledge that although many BYU students achieve this high level of excellence in their own college careers, there are also those students who are prepared to meet these high expectations of excellence.

BYU is becoming known as a very good school academically," said Connor, from the Office of Student Development. He added that this increased recognition has resulted in two developments: "One, we are attracting students of higher potential, and two, minimum admission requirements have become more stringent."

Tanner, from the Office of Admission and Records, explained these two developments. "There are basically two ways to screen incoming students based on academic achievement. We look at their grade-point averages and we look at the high school courses that make up those averages."

Tanner said although the average grade point is 3.4, his office has begun to deemphasize GPA's and emphasize more the courses taken. "Additional weighting is given for college preparatory courses. For example, a B in English is given more weight than a high grade in a class of less academic rigor," he said.

Tanner said his office tries to work with entering freshmen early, while they are still in high school, in helping them prepare for college.

If they come better prepared, they can start here at a higher level."

Osborn said students at BYU today are "better prepared academically now than they were 10 years ago. In my classroom experience I have discovered that their reading ability is higher and their ability to critically think is higher."

Hendricks said she finds most BYU students better prepared for college and careers than students elsewhere. "I am over and over amazed at the students' abilities, at their preparedness. They are better prepared and are more aware of what they need to do to prepare than most others in general."

According to Hendricks, one built in problem with the system, however, is that "as soon as you reach for excellence, there will be those that won't make it, that will drop out."

"We are academically high in our expectations, we want to recruit the best, those that will achieve. We anticipate a high level of competency in incoming students, and we teach at that level," she said.

However, she added, "Everyone can't perform at that level."

According to John Call, assistant administrator for Academic Standards, "Fifteen to 18 percent of the Two travelling art exhibitions have come to BYU and will be featured in the Harris Fine Arts Center from now until August 12.

"Tradition in Transition," an exhibition featuring current trends in Japanese woodblock printmaking, will be on display in Gallery 303, HFAC, and the 65th annual travelling art exhibit of the National Watercolor Society is in the B.F. Larsen Gallery (located in the lobby of the third floor).

The 65th show continues a tradition that was started in 1921 at the old Los Angeles Museum of History, Science and Art.

The show at BYU will contain not only watercolors but also materials such as collage, casein and acrylic used with watercolors.

The Japanese exhibit of woodblock prints consists of art executed by many of Japan's leading contemporary printmakers.

The art is derived from a centuries-old art of printmaking that was originally developed to show the pleasures of men and women in the red-light district of what is now known as Tokyo.

Over the centuries however, the art has been modernized and westernized and has moved in many new directions.

Both shows are open to the public with no admission charge. The B.F. Larsen Gallery is open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Gallery 303 is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., with extended hours Mondays and Wednesdays until 9 p.m. and Saturdays from 5 to 9 p.m.

student body have academic difficulty."

"All students come to BYU at different levels of development," said Dale Goodson, a counselor in the Counseling and Development Center. "We have many students who are mature and plan ahead for graduation and a job and yet we also have students who have difficulty making these decisions."

"We don't address the needs of those students who aren't as prepared for our high expectations," said Hendricks. "We need to have more programs to help them adjust. I think we have an obligation to help them."

Call said his office is piloting some programs, such as an individual counseling program and other academic support programs to see what effect they will have in helping students succeed in their academic career.

Hendricks said these students can help themselves by seeking help as soon as they start struggling. "Don't wait until it's too late," she said.

"The Family Vocabulary"

Every family has a vocabulary. This vocabulary defines the family members' relationships with each other, with God, and with other human beings outside the family. The vocabulary is an index to the discipline in the house, the love, the spirituality, the hope, and it makes the transfer of family values from parents to the children possible. And the vocabulary is the first protection the family has against violence, exploitation, obscenity, bigotry, secretiveness, and abuse of all kinds. Yet in our families we very seldom study this family vocabulary. But we need to. It is incredibly important to the stability of our families.

'Y leads in computer-aided language

By ROGER H. COOK
Universe Staff Writer

BYU leads the world in computer-aided language instruction because of its already broad base of language knowledge and recent advances in high technology, according to a computer expert from BYU.

Grant Howlett, administrative assistant to the Computer Assisted Language and Learning Instruction Consortium (CALICO), said BYU manages a clearinghouse of information and services for those researching, teaching and learning languages with the help of computers. CALICO originated nearly 10 years ago when the U.S. Defense Department felt the need to teach U.S. overseas diplomats and officers the languages they would be using in other countries.

The program was originally funded by the Defense Department but now stands on its own.

"With the number of foreign-language-speaking returned missionaries from around the world attending the university, we have a very strong information base to make us leaders in the field," said Howlett.

According to Sheila Vasquez, CALICO database manager, some funding still exists for the development of language programs on videodisc. One of these programs, "German Gateway," was developed by CALICO Director Frank Otto and is currently being used by the Defense Department's Defense Language Institute (DLI) in Monterey, Calif.

Howlett said the motivation for learning has greatly increased in those learning from the videodisc program. He said the typical DLI student arrives for classes and self-instruction by 9 a.m. and is gone by 3:30 p.m. But, he said, those learning on Otto's program begin arriving around 7 a.m., and some have to be encouraged to leave at the 10 p.m. closing time.

Otto said the difference is the highly individualized nature of interactive videodisc instruction. With this new technology, students can learn at their own pace without the embarrassment and awkwardness of trying to speak an unfamiliar tongue and without the pressure created when a few students catch on faster than their classmates.

"Our studies show they spend more time on task with this system than students in a regular classroom," said Otto. "That's a big advantage, because you learn language by exposure. The more time you spend practicing, the more proficient you become."

The real test, said Howlett, will be in tracking those students in a year or so and seeing how much German they've comprehended over a period of time.

Using the system, a student can hear and see a certain sequence as many times as needed, talk into a tape that is later reviewed by an instructor, freeze the action and hear the speech at a slowed rate, and even have the computer at any point show him a native would respond to questions or situations.

"The fact that you see language in context, in its culturally authentic context, accounts for much of the preference for learning this way," Otto said. "All of the topics, events and situations that they're likely to encounter when they go to Germany are depicted for them."

Besides German, other audio/videodisc foreign language courses include Korean, Spanish and Hebrew. Howlett said that within 24 hours after U.S. sources found that intelligence agencies in the Middle East were collecting data on U.S. military interests, BYU received a call from the Defense Department requesting they begin a language program on Yemen/Arabic.

Howlett said one reason why local facilities don't take a greater concern in the success of this type of language learning is because of the expense involved in computer hardware and development of software. However, Hendricks said his office had been in contact with the Missionary Training Center on possible usages of such devices.

CALICO also publishes a quarterly journal for its members. This serves as the consortium's chief conveyor of information.

Every summer CALICO sponsors a Summer Institute that provides an opportunity for both the novice and those with previous experience to receive hands-on classroom/lab experience in various classes that are offered. Vasquez said graduate credit may be obtained from the summer workshop. Last year the Summer Institute was at BYU; this year Duke University will host it.

Frank R. Otto, director of CALICO, advocates the use of computers in learning foreign languages.

Two symposia are sponsored by CALICO each year. One is in the United States and the other is abroad. In 1987, CALICO will travel to the Sorbonne in Paris where some of the world's top linguists will meet.

The decision to hold the symposium there was a result of a connection made with a public relations specialist for France's Ministry of Education.

Speaking of Otto and the CALICO symposium Rothman said, "The organization is excellent and enables people like me (without formal training in the field) to participate easily." He continued, "I go to these kinds of meetings in France and Europe all the time, but this was the best symposium I've been to."

Dirty fun unites BYU 'Oozeballers'

Some dirty fun is planned for BYU students as the Student Alumni Association (SAA) hosts its mud-volleyball tournament August 2.

Senior Class President and Chairman of the SAA Board of Directors Heidi Seville said the "Oozeball" tournament will be fashioned after those held at the University of Nebraska and the University of Arizona.

She said the tournament will be held in the mud at the BYU farm, at 2230 N. Canyon Rd. in Provo. "We're going to turn the sprinklers on the horse corrals and make things as muddy as possible."

That is open to teams made up of BYU department employees, ward members, just friends who may want to make up their own team. Registration forms may be picked up in any college advisement center and must be returned to 2254 SFLC by July 25. There will be a $5 entry fee for each team and prizes will be awarded to tournament winners.

According to Ida Smith, director of Alumni Activities and advisor to the SAA, a strongly identifiable graduation class does not exist at BYU as might be found at other institutions. She said this is because of the sheer size of the student body at BYU and because of the disruption caused by missions.

The SAA, now in its fourth year, was organized to help create greater unity within each academic college between the graduating students, the Alumni Association, and the university.

"The oozeball tournament is an effort to try and unify the senior class," said Smith. "We would like to bond the students to the university early, so they will participate in BYU Alumni programs once they graduate."

Smith said she is concerned about the number of students who leave BYU after their first year and sponsors many programs for them. "We won't have them as seniors if we don't keep them as freshmen," she said.

The SAA hopes to make the oozeball tournament a competition between other universities.

Utah may end flooding

Utah Lake and the Great Salt Sea rise to flooding levels and government officials talk of spending $10 million to pump flood water to drier areas, the answer may be as simple as sun, according to one BYU geography professor.

Professor Dale Stevens said, "There is no need to pump the Salt Sea, because we will be going into another dry cycle." According to Stevens, the cycles last about 20 years.

"We may maybe have one more year of wet weather and then go into a dry period."

But weather patterns are hard to predict, said Stevens. Forecasts are formed from bits of information from the weather service.

Students lose deposits because of negligence

According to an investigator for the Student Alumni Office at BYU, many students are losing a lot of their house deposits simply because they aren't reading the contracts clearly. Kimball, a senior from Provo, said it's not a matter of the managers ripping the students off, but the fact that the students aren't checking their apartments out first.

any of the apartments have damage done to them before the students move in. It is up to the students to check the apartments thoroughly for damages before moving in and to find out what is wrong to their managers to avoid being charged for the damages later, said Kimball.

According to Kimball, the Ombudsman is a mediator between the house managers and the students. "We have many students who come in to us with problems relating to their deposits," said Kimball. "We contact the managers, find out why the student lost part of their deposit and let the student know what they did wrong."

There is a Utah State Law that entitles tenants to receive their deposits back within 30 days of moving out, says Kimball. "If the tenants don't receive their full deposit, then they must receive, also within 30 days, an itemized list of deductions. If no deposit or explanation is received within the 30 days the tenants can take their managers to small claims court and settle it there."

For questions regarding student housing contracts, students can contact EYU Ombudsman Scott Kimball, 436 ELWC.

"We wouldn't have a baby anywhere else."

All of Jim and LaDawn Jacob's 11 children have been born at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center. Mrs. Jacob was the National Young Mother for 1982.

"All of our children have been born at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center, and we've had a good experience every time."

"The nurses were very aware of our preferences, and it was very apparent that they were anxious to make our stay at the hospital as comfortable as possible. We could see the baby anytime and husbands are allowed to visit whenever they want."

"The private rooms are nice and pleasant, with quilts, plants, and attractive pictures and curtains. They have a warm and cozy feeling."

"We've been very satisfied with Utah Valley Regional Medical Center. We wouldn't have a baby anywhere else."

Clemens, Gooden to meet

Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves will play centerfield in tonight's All-Star game.

HOUSTON (AP) — The two managers made it official: Roger Clemens vs. Dwight Gooden in baseball's 57th All-Star Game tonight at the Astro-dome.

That left American League Manager Dick Howser with just one pitching question left to answer. Where was Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd?

"That's a tough one to field right off the bat," Howser said at a Monday morning news conference at which he and his National League counterpart, Whitey Herzog, announced their starting lineups. "We only selected eight pitchers. I want to be very careful about this. There is a guy in Boston who got left out. He's an outstanding pitcher. But we couldn't take everybody," Howser said.

The volatile Boyd returned to the Boston Red Sox's clubhouse Sunday to apologize for leaving the team last Thursday in a huff over not being selected for the team. At 1-4, Boyd was second only to teammate Clemens, 15-2, in victories for the Red Sox.

"My teammates have accepted me back, and I'll be back out there pitching my heart out for them again," said Boyd, who was suspended for three days and missed a pitching turn Sunday because of his walkout.

However, over the diplomat, said he was sorry "to see how dismayed he was, and I think that's enough said. I feel sorry about Oil Can. We picked some extra people because we thought we needed the bats ... but I do feel sorry for Boyd. I don't envy his situation at all."

Howser said he would start Clemens despite the fact that Clemens pitched nine innings on Saturday, snapping a two-game losing streak. Gooden, 10-4, has won two of his last three and has not pitched since last Wednesday.

"I saw Dwight throw against us in spring. He's in a class of his own out there," said Clemens, who will be appearing in his first All-Star Game in a town near where he grew up. "I think I have the advantage being at home."

Howser said he would use Ted Higuera of Milwaukee and Charlie Hough of Texas after Clemens.

Howser also announced a batting order of center fielder Kirby Puckett, Minnesota; left fielder Rickey Henderson, New York; third baseman Wade Boggs, Boston; catcher Lance Parrish, Detroit; first baseman Wally Joyner, California; shortstop Cal Ripken, Baltimore; right fielder Dave Winfield, New York; second baseman Lou Whitaker, Detroit; and Clemens. Boggs is replacing Kansas City's George Brett, who was elected to start but has a sore arm.

BYU hoop signee given prep award

Nathan Call, an all-around athlete from Capistrano Valley High School, who has signed a basketball letter-of-intent with BYU, has been named Southern California Prep Athlete of the Year by an athletic foundation in Los Angeles.

Call, who will enroll at BYU this fall, was an all-CIF choice in three sports: basketball, football and baseball. He is the only athlete in the history of Orange County's North-South all-star series to be chosen to play in all three all-star games.

As a freshman, Call made the Capistrano Valley team as a wide receiver. His brother, Burt, was then quarterback. Nathan moved to the quarterback position as a junior, returning to wide receiver as a senior. In basketball the 6-0, 180-pound senior was named All-South Coast League on a team that won the league championship. Call averaged 20 points per game and led the conference in assists.

Nathan played left field for Cougar baseball team, and bats .438 for the season.

In the 15 years the Amateur Athletic Foundation has named an outstanding Southern California Prep Athlete of the Year, three have been enrolled at BYU: Steve Craig (1977), Mike Smith (1980) and Nathan Call (1986). Included among the other winners were Charles White (1970) and John Elway (1979).

Gymnastics: Soviets sweep Americans

MOSCOW (AP) — American wrestlers captured three gold medals at the Goodwill Games Monday, while Soviet gymnasts swept the medals in all-around competition, again shutting out a disappointing American team.

John Smith, Dave Schultz and Bruce Baumgartner each defeated a Soviet opponent in their gold-medal matches, boosting the American medal count to 59, 34 gold.

But the Soviets took seven wrestling golds Monday, widening their lead in the medals race with a total of 145, 59 gold.

Smith defeated Khazen Isaev 4-3 in the 136-pound class, despite complaining of a bad call in the second period when he scrambled out of bounds.

Schultz and Baumgartner were both gold medalists in the 1984 Olympics.

Schultz rallied from a 2-0 deficit to down Adlan Varayev 4-2 in the 163-pound class. Baumgartner scored the final point with just 22 seconds remaining, edging out David Gobeidzhishvili in the 286-pound match. The score ended in 4-4 and Baumgartner won on criteria.

In gymnastics, held before just 3,000 people in the cavernous Olympic Stadium Hall, the Soviets swept the medals as Yuri Korolev won the gold, Valentin Mogilyan the silver and Vladimir Artemov the bronze. The top American finisher, Charles Lake, was seventh.

The United States opened the men's volleyball tournament with a 15-8, 15-9, 15-10 victory over Bulgaria.

Shot put tests athlete's endurance

By ERIC B. NIVEN
Universe Staff Writer

Soren Tallhem, a BYU shot putter from Sweden, heaves a 16-pound shot again and again as he tries to work for world-class status.

"Pound for pound, Soren is one of the best shot putters in the world," said BYU track coach Clarence Robison. "He can throw farther than others much larger than he is."

The shot put event is a test of strength in track and field meets. It requires the contestant to put or push a heavy steel ball as far as possible. The shot weighs 16 pounds for men and 8 pounds for women in college and Olympic events.

Does 16 pounds seem like much? Try putting an average unmounted automobile tire and see how far it goes while confined to a circle seven feet in diameter.

Two styles are used in the shot put, the glide style or the spin style, said Robison.

According to Robison, the glide style is the most widely used. This style requires a pendulum swing with the left leg and a push with the right leg as the shot putter turns and pushes the shot.

A newer style of putting is called the spin style. This style requires the putter to spin around one-and-a-half times before putting the shot. The shot is nestled in the right hand against the right side of the neck and chin until the release in both styles.

The distance is measured from the inside edge of the circle to the mark made on the first bounce.

Using the glide style the putter's average gain is between 7 and 9 percent better than the best standing heave.

The spin style promotes an average gain of between 11 to 23 percent, Robison said.

"There is a lot of power work in the shot put," Robison said. Training for the shot put requires an extensive weight training program and drills for technique, explosive bursts of strength, and overall power.

Jane Geddes outduels Sally Little for U.S. Women's Open golf title

KETTERING, Ohio (AP) — Jane Geddes shot a 1-under-par 71 to defeat Sally Little by two strokes in an 18-hole playoff Monday for the U.S. Women's Open golf championship.

The victory, worth $50,000, was the 26-year-old Geddes' first as a professional.

Little, with 14 LPGA victories in a 16-year career, shot a final-round 73 and collected $25,000.

There were three ties and three lead changes during the 18-hole head-to-head match over NCR's 6,243-yard, par-72 layout.

Geddes, who faced a three-shot deficit on the front nine, took the lead for good with a birdie on the 14th hole and saw her advantage go to two strokes when Little bogied the 15th.

Geddes, who took up the game at the relatively advanced age of 17, took her first lead when she rolled in a 10-foot putt on the second hole. But she bogeyed the next hole, and Little went on a tear with birdies on the fourth, fifth and sixth holes to take a three-stroke advantage.

Greg Norman still lacking major golf title

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Australian Greg Norman, who has been on a rampage around North America, is a man with a mission coming into the 111th British Open Golf Championship.

"Ever since I was a small boy, when I was first learning to play the game, my sole ambition has been to be regarded as the best in the world," Norman said.

His recent, record-setting spree in the United States and Canada has enabled him to take some major strides in that direction.

But there's still something lacking. His impressive record still contains one huge, gaping blank.

Norman has yet to win one of golf's four major titles.

And to be regarded as the best in the world, victories in the Masters, the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA are necessary.

He has come close. So very close.

Little's lead evaporated when she bogeyed the eighth hole and left a sand shot in the bunker on the way to a double-bogey on the ninth. Geddes took advantage of Little's mistakes with a 10-foot birdie putt on the par-3 eighth hole that gave her a one-shot lead at the turn.

Little, a native of South Africa, who is a naturalized American citizen, birdied the 10th hole to pull even at 1-under. Both golfers birdied the par-5 12th and parred the 11th and 13th.

But Geddes pulled away, sinking a 5-foot birdie putt on the 14th and Little bogeyed the 15th.

Little pulled within a stroke when Geddes bogeyed the 16th, but Little bogeyed the 17th to push the lead back to two shots.

Geddes became the 11th golfer, and the second in as many years, to make the Women's Open her first professional victory. Kathy Baker won the Open last year.

Geddes had rounds of 74, 74, 70 and 69 during the rain-plagued 72-hole tournament, while Little posted scores of 73, 72, 72 and 70. Both began the playoff at 1-under-par 257.

He lost an 18-hole playoff to Fuzzy Zoeller for the 1984 U.S. Open. Four months ago he finished second to Jack Nicklaus in the Masters when Norman bogeyed the final hole. Last month, he led through the second and third rounds of the American national championship — but again falled over the final 18.

"I'll be disappointed if I don't win in the majors," said the craggy-faced man known as "The Great White Shark."
